Vega. The Great...a spy on his officials??!!!

Hello everyone,
I wonder if you have noticed that too?
I was recently watching few Grendizer episodes (haphazardly) and I noticed that in many instances when say for example Gandal and Blaki, or Gandal and Zuril are arguing or discussing something, Vega suddenly appears in the monitor fully aware of the conversation that took place before his appearance!
Was he spying on them, or what?
And if so, why didn't he find out Zuril's and Gandal's plot to assassinate Dantos (ep52)???? Umm! Maybe he was asleep while they planned that.
But isn't strange that he appeared fully aware of his officials arguments "on the spot"???

Well, Suzi, may I play a little with theories? ^_^

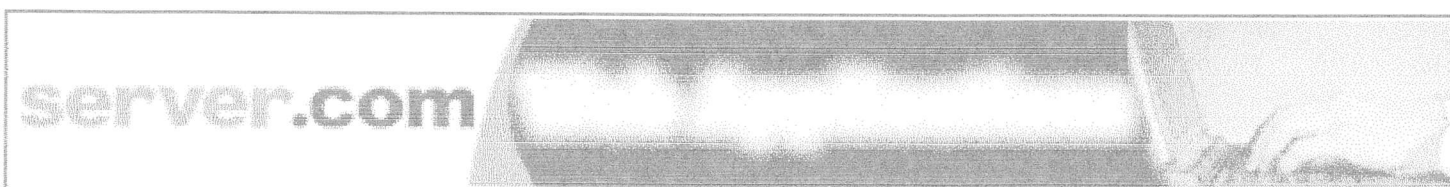

Let's say this: Vega had installed a spy system in the main room of the Moon Base, and a soldier was appointed to advise him when something required the King to appear. But when Vega himself and his officials arrived at the Moon Base in ep52, the sudden confusion about Roles&Responsibilities (I can tell you, it's a BIG issues in organisations! The main issue of all! LOL!) raised let the soldier suppose he was not more required for his task or he was removed so... nobody understood Gandal & Zuril's plan to kill Dantus.

Do you like it? It's just for fun, of course... ^_^

Well, and this is for fun too.
I thought of a different theory. Vega had a spy system on the main room in the Moon Base installed in his quaters in Planet Vega.
When he left Planet Vega, he could no longer access this spying system, besides the sudden loss of Planet Vega and the choas that followed as well organisation issues made him too busy to think of installing a new one.
Secondly, his arrogance now that he was at the Moon Base himself, might make him think that he could watch his officials closely.
But they did manage to play behind his back after all!
Ah! This Zuril is so devious!!!!
